

The Struggle for Equality

There have been many stories on the news about protests in this country.

In many cities and towns, people are protesting how the police treat people of color. Although some demonstrations turned violent, most were peaceful. In September 2020, Time magazine reported 93% of all protests were done peacefully. Still, communities seem broken. But you can help bring your community together!

Let's work together to organize a community meeting. You will bring together community members to develop solutions to the racial injustice in the community.

You will need to educate the community about the history of inequality in this country. Which laws prevented people of color from feeling equal? How have we made progress? What still needs to be done?

Spread the word through a public advertising campaign. Then design a meeting where community members can share their views and develop concrete ideas to move forward. Together, we can achieve equality!
